On Monday evening, Dean Groves sent an email out to the UVa community to alert students and faculty to a viral social media event, "Punish a Muslim Day." It is unknown who contrived "Punish a Muslim Day" but officials have determined that the event originated in the UK. Dean Groves reminded students that although no indications pointed to an immediate threat at the University of Virginia, everyone should continue to be vigilant.

"Although we are aware of no connection to a specific threat targeting members of the University community, we are informed that fliers supporting this virulent campaign of hate have been reported at other American colleges and universities," he stated in the email.
